> The5ers High Stakes is a two-step evaluation with 10% and 5% targets, 5% daily and 10% total loss limits, unlimited evaluation time, and a scaling ceiling of $500,000. The low entry price and clear scaling path are attractive, but the 30-day inactivity rule, news-entry window, biweekly withdrawal cadence, and restrictions on third-party EAs make the programme best suited to disciplined traders who read the rulebook closely.

Score breakdown

Trust · 3.5 / 5

The5ers publishes the core High Stakes rules and withdrawal conditions in first-party pages, but it is a simulated proprietary trading programme rather than a regulated retail brokerage.

Cost · 4.0 / 5

The reviewed 2.5K New Classic High Stakes account is advertised at $19, placing the reference entry price at the low end of the market.

Payout speed · 3.0 / 5

The first withdrawal becomes available 14 days after funded activation; later approved withdrawals follow a two-week cadence and normal processing is five to eight business days.

Drawdown rules · 3.4 / 5

The reviewed programme uses a 5% maximum daily loss and 10% maximum total loss, with unlimited evaluation time but a 30-day inactivity expiry.

Scaling plan · 4.2 / 5

Published 10% growth milestones can raise the account to $500,000 and the reward share from 80% toward 100%.

Trading platform · 3.5 / 5

High Stakes uses MT5 Hedge on desktop, web, and mobile; personally owned EAs may be used under the prohibited-practices policy.

Customer support · 3.5 / 5

The5ers offers help-centre material, email, and live chat; this review did not independently time a support response.

Account opening · 3.5 / 5

The two-stage evaluation is straightforward, with three profitable days per phase and no overall time limit.

Restrictions · 3.1 / 5

The firm restricts high-impact-news entries and exits, third-party EAs, arbitrage, and abusive high-frequency server traffic.

Frequently asked questions

How many High Stakes phases are there?

Two. The reviewed programme targets 10% in Phase 1 and 5% in Phase 2.

Is there a time limit?
